

THE TRADE REVIEW BY DUN & COMPANY

BETTER BUSINESS SEEMS TO BE ASSURED.

The Grain Movement Held Responsible For the Improvement—Good Excess Of Merchandise Exports Over Imports—Wool Market Stronger—The Week's Failures.

New York, Oct. 17.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: The one commercial change which more than any other insures better business in the near future is the excess of merchandise exports over imports. In September exports were $85,098,594 and imports only $50,325,705, and the excess of exports was $34,772,889, in payment for which net imports of gold were $34,249,183. Last year the excess of merchandise exports was $6,765,257 in September and net exports of gold $16,506,558. In the four principal classes: exports increased $20,641,134, more than half in cotton. In two weeks of October the exports from New York have increased 30.6 per cent, against 31.2 in September, while imports have decreased 24 per cent, against 35.2 in September. Continued shipments of gold from Europe, not including $4,000,000 from Australia, now amount to $59,250,000 since the movement began, of which $52,250,000 has already arrived, and has not been arrested by measures taken by the great European banks.

The heavy movement of grain is the cornerstone. After an increase of $5,923,675 in exports of breadstuffs in September there have been shipped the past week from Atlantic ports alone 2,134,774 bushels, flour included, and 4,203,845 in two weeks of October, against 3,510,271 bushels last year. A more important fact is that all available grain freights have been engaged for months ahead here and on the Pacific coast. The minister of agriculture in India stated in council on Thursday that distress was expected in a large part of India as the result of drought, but importations of wheat from California would help to prevent actual famine. A high official of Russia now in this country confirms accounts of shortness in the Russian yield. Thus estimates that Europe will fall 100,000,000 bushels short of last year in supply of wheat are strongly supported, and while department estimates of the yield in this country are not credited there is every reason to expect a remarkable foreign demand. Western receipts fall a little below last year's and for two weeks have been 14,235,016 bushels, against 15,084,483 last year. Wheat has advanced 4½ cents for the week and corn 2 cents.

Confidence as to the future makes trouble in some industries, because speculation in materials raises prices so that demand for finished products is checked. Boot and shoe makers get very narrow orders at old prices, or at an advance less than 1 per cent for the week and less than 6 per cent from the lowest point. Similar difficulties threaten in the iron manufacture. Wool is stronger, with continued speculative buying, and sales at eastern markets have been 14,536,300 pounds for two weeks, against 12,209,700 last year and 13,702,800 in 1892, but consigned wool has been mostly withdrawn until after the election. No gain is at present possible in goods, and though the number of mills starting for the week is fifteen, against seven stopping, much of the work done is in anticipation of a better demand than now exists. The cotton manufacture has also started more spindles, but the demand for goods scarcely increases and print cloths sell at 2.56 cents. The manufacture of minor metals also drags, though domestic demand for copper is moderate at $10.75 for lake. Lead is a shade weaker at $2.75, and tinmakers are underselling foreign 15 to 20 cents per box. Failures for the week have been 328 in the United States, against 263 last year, and forty in Canada, against forty-six last year.

MICHIGAN TOWNS TURN OUT CROWDS.

Nominee of the Allied Silver Forces Delivered Twenty-Three Speeches Yesterday—Tom Watson Withdraws His Name From the Kansas Fusion Ticket.

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 17.—William Jennings Bryan spoke to twenty-three meetings, beginning at 7 o'clock Friday morning at Muskegon and ending at Lansing close to midnight. Most of the candidate's hearers belonged to the farming class. Mrs. Bryan accompanied her husband to every platform from which he spoke, and when his addresses were made from the rear of the car she stood by his side. Lansing was reached at 7:30 o'clock and a torch-light procession three blocks in length was in waiting. Three meetings had been arranged, one in a large clothing establishment, to an audience of women, the second in the Star theater and the third on the stand erected in front of the capitol building. An enormous crowd welcomed the nominee at Jackson. Brief stops and short platform talks were made at Leslie and Mason before Lansing was reached.

At Muskegon a goodly crowd had gathered at 7 o'clock, although the meeting had not been arranged for until late Thursday, and the citizens of the place cheered him when Mrs. Bryan he emerged from the car. At Holland, when at 8 o'clock the nominee arrived, there was a large crowd. In the crowds at Bangor some yellow badges fluttered in the brisk wind. Hartford's listeners seemed to be all silver people and their enthusiasm was unstinted. Waterville produced a banner bearing the presentment of the republican candidate, with the motto: "McKinley, the advance agent of prosperity."

At Benton Harbor Mr. Bryan left the train and was driven to the Hotel Benton, where he spoke from a balcony. St. Joe was down for a speech, but the citizens of that place went over to Benton Harbor to hear Mr. Bryan and nobody welcomed him at St. Joe. Niles was reached at 11:30 and Mr. Bryan was driven to the high school grounds. There he addressed a crowd of several thousand for twenty minutes. Brief stops were made at Decatur and Lawton, where Mr. Bryan spoke from the car platform. When Kalamazoo was reached a great crowd greeted the special. Carriages were in waiting and Mr. Bryan was escorted to Brunton park. Marshall was the next stop. A brief stop was made at Albion, where yellow ribbons were in evidence. While the candidate was speaking from a platform near the track the boards gave way, but fortunately nobody was hurt. He finished his address from the rear platform of the car.

MINERS IN A SAD PLIGHT.

Forced to Choose Between Starvation in Idleness and Starvation Wages.

Nelsonville, O., Oct. 17.—The 3,000 coal miners employed in this vicinity are divided on the proposition to reduce wages to 45 cents for each ton mined. Professor F. S. Coultrap, superintendent of schools here, who two years ago was appointed by Governor McKinley to distribute provisions to needy miners' families, says the miners are little better prepared for a labor suspension than they were then. At Glen Ebon, five miles south of here, the miners have been on a strike for several months. Miners' families there have nothing on which to live. Near the village are several cornfields in which are big crops of pumpkins. The wives of the miners have foraged upon these and have taken nearly the whole crop. Many families have nothing to eat but these pumpkins.

The general belief is that the operators will close the mines if the reduction is not accepted. The outlook is a gloomy one. It seems to be a choice between starvation without work and work at starvation wages.

SYLVAIN CHARPENTIER.

BENNETT; fatally injured.

The fire broke out in the premises of Gilmour Bros. & Co., chemical importers, 31 St. Peter street. In fifteen minutes the flames had spread to the tobacco factory of B. Goldstein & Co., on one side of the Gilmour building, and to the wholesale tea house of Kearney Bros. on the other. By this time the Gilmour building was a mass of flames.

The firemen pressed up the ladders to the fourth story, and sixteen of the men forced their way through the blinding smoke and played upon the flames, which had now receded to the back portion of the building. All at once, and without a second's warning, the entire floor gave way under their combined weight and the whole sixteen men were hurled amid heaps of charred wood and loose masonry to the cellar.

The work of rescue was immediately begun by the firemen, and man after man was carried out of the building bruised and bleeding, to be quickly transported to the hospitals. The loss will be large in the three buildings, probably upward of $200,000.

Conway Simpson.

The Edgerton Reporter gives the following account of the wedding of a young lady well known in this city: James M. Conway and Miss Hettie Simpson were very quietly joined in marriage at 4 o'clock on Wednesday last, the ceremony taking place at the residence of the officiating clergyman, Rev. J. E. Harlan. Mel. Conway, brother of the groom, and Miss Myrtle Hutson, sister of the bride, were the only relatives present. The bride and groom were immediately driven to Janesville, where they took the train for a brief wedding trip to Chicago. Both the bride and groom are among the best known young people of Edgerton. Mr. Conway is the senior member of the bustling firm of Conway Bros., doing an extensive business in tobacco, horse buying and farming. The bride has of late years filled a position in the Bank of Edgerton. The best wishes and congratulations of a large circle of friends are freely tendered. Mr. and Mrs. Conway will be "at home" at the Hutson homestead after Nov. 1st.

PORTER PEOPLE LIKED SPEECH

Correspondent says Kind Words for Two Republican Orators.

The Porter correspondent of the Edgerton Reporter says: "On last Friday evening, Messrs. W. A. Jackson and T. S. Nolan, of Janesville, were greeted by an audience that filled every seat, and occupied every inch of standing room in the Stevens school house. For two hours those present listened to the best political speaking ever given in Rock county. The speakers confined their remarks mainly to the money question, and it was an able, convincing and earnest argument for republicanism, sound money and protection. On next Saturday evening a meeting will be held in the Wilder school house, when Messrs. Metcalf and Bates will address the people."

THEY SEEK THE LAD WHO FLED IN FEAR

FAMILY LIVING NEAR EDGER- TON SORE DISTRESSED.

While Six Year Old Boy Was Playing With His Brother, a Revolver Was Accidentally Discharged With Fatal Consequence—Think the Elder May Have Committed Suicide.

One child dead, and another missing.

Mother—critically ill—worrying over the thought that the missing boy has killed himself, fearing that he may be held responsible.

A six-year-old son of Ole Wettleson, residing near the town line, between Pleasant Springs and Christians, was accidentally shot and killed. The boy, with a brother fourteen years of age, were playing with a 38 calibre revolver when the weapon was discharged, the ball passing entirely through the head near the left temple. The older boy disappeared shortly after the accident. The parents are afraid he may have put himself out of the way from fear. The mother was dangerously ill at the time and the shock makes her case critical. The Wettleson boy was in Edgerton after the accident but no one seemed to know where he went from there, though he was seen to board an east bound freight.

To a person whom he begged for ten cents to buy something to eat, he said he was on his way to Milwaukee where he had relatives, that his mother was dead, and not being able to agree with his father he had decided to leave home. After being given something to eat he left town on the bumpers of a train bound for Milwaukee. The boy has been in the habit of reading detective stories and similar literature and is believed to have a desire to imitate some of that class of heroes.

THE BADGER CROPS RANK WELL

Oats and Corn in Particular Are Rated High.

The summary of this season's climate and crops as issued by the weather department states that the season just closed has been a fairly successful one in all departments of agriculture. There was a large deficiency in precipitation during the latter part of the season of 1895 and the light crop of winter grain and hay can be traced directly to the drought of last fall. In the agricultural report for September Wisconsin oats are given a rating of 85, against an average for the entire country of 74, while barley is 82, which is very close to the average condition for all the states. Corn is the banner crop of the present season, the weather conditions being extremely favorable during the whole period of germination, growth and maturity and the yield is not only heavy but of an excellent quality. The crop in this state is rated 102 as against the average of the country of 91, with only six states having a higher average than Wisconsin. The hot weather during the early part of August had a very deteriorating effect upon potatoes and the crop is poor both in quantity and quality. Fruit has been plentiful and tobacco growers have had an excellent season.

TEN GEOLOGISTS ON A JAUNT.

Chicago Professors Go Through Janesville on a Jaunt.

Iddings, C. E. Peet, H. B. Kummell, J. P. Goode, H. Bain, Louis Sars, O. F. Tolman and C. Weedman. The geologists will examine some peculiar rock formation at Devil's lake, and return to the university on Monday.

DIPHTHERIA IS UNDER CONTROL

Edgerton People Do Not Fear Further Spread of the Disease.

Rigid measures are still being employed to keep down the spread of diphtheria in Edgerton. But two new cases have developed during the week and both are doing well. Disinfectants are liberally used and the authorities hope they will soon have the disease stamped out entirely. If no more cases appear the schools will be resumed next week. The disease is reported in the family of James McGrain in the town of Fulton, the Reporter says.

Sales Talk

With Hood's Sarsaparilla, "Sales Talk," and show that this medicine has enjoyed public confidence and patronage to a greater extent than any other proprietary medicine. This is because it possesses greater medicinal merit and produces greater cures than any other. It is not what we say, but what Hood's Sarsaparilla does, that Tells the Story.

All advertisements of Hood's Sarsaparilla, like Hood's Sarsaparilla itself, are honest. We have never deceived the public, and this with its superlative medicinal merit, is why the people have abiding confidence in it, and buy Hood's Sarsaparilla almost to the exclusion of all others.

Customers Want Hood's.

"We order Hood's Sarsaparilla in large quantities and it is the only blood purifier which a druggist can buy in large quantities without risk. It is selling very rapidly and customers who buy it once are sure to call for Hood's the next time. We believe Hood's Sarsaparilla must possess true merit in order to retain its popularity. Its sales exceed all similar preparations and its praises are often heard." L. SOMMER & SON, Springfield, Illinois. Thousands of druggists say the same.

THE LAW RELATING TO DEER

The Clause That Was Set Aside and the One In Force.

Under the fish and game law of the state now in force deer hunters will have to get in their deadly work within the next two weeks. The law now in force is that passed by the legislature in 1893, the law of 1895 having been declared invalid by the supreme court. Under the law of 1893 the open season for deer is from October 1 to October 31. Under the law of 1895 the season was from November 1 to November 21. Scores of letters and telegrams from hunters are being received daily at the office of the fish and game warden asking for information in this regard. The section of the law of 1895 relating to the capture and killing of deer is as follows:

"It shall be unlawful and prohibited—deer season—1. To kill, capture or take by any kind of device or contrivance whatever, or to pursue with intent to kill or to take or worry any deer, buck, doe or fawn between the 21st day of November in each year, and he succeeding first day of November in the year following; all the months of the year except the first twenty days of the month of November being hereby declared the close season for the animals named in this section, provided, however, that the killing, taking or worrying of any deer, buck, doe or fawn is hereby prohibited in the county of Sheboygan for the period of five years.

"Use of dogs for deer prohibited—2. To hunt deer, buck or doe in the night time, or at any time with dogs.

"Rabbit hunting with dogs prohibited in deer season—3. To use a dog or dogs to hunt rabbits during the time the law permits the hunting of deer; provided, that this subdivision shall not apply to the counties of Green, Dane, Rock, Walworth, Kenosha, Racine, Milwaukee, Waukesha, Jefferson, Ozaukee, Fond du Lac, Columbia, Winnebago, Calumet, Dodge, Washington, Iowa, Crawford, Grant, Manitowish, Kewaunee and that portion of Door lying south of Sturgeon Bay and Lafayette.

The section of the 1892 law relating to the hunting of deer, and the law now in force is as follows:

"It shall be unlawful to kill or take by any kind of contrivance or device whatever, or pursue with intent to kill or take or worry any deer, buck, doe or fawn, between the first day of November and the succeeding first day of October of each year, or to hunt deer, buck or doe or fawn, with dog or dogs at any time, and it shall be lawful for any person to shoot or kill any deer while such dog is in active pursuit of any deer, buck, doe or fawn, in violation of the provisions of this act. It shall be unlawful to use dog or dogs to hunt rabbits during the time the law permits the hunting of deer, and any complaint or objection made by the owner of such dog or any person against such killing shall be prima facie evidence that such complaining party encouraged such dog in such pursuit.

lish hero, courtier and poet, was killed at Zut-phen, Holland.

1706—Ninon de l'Enclos, famous wit and beauty, "the 1863—John Brown astonished the world by seizing Harper's Ferry arsenal. When attacked, the party took refuge in the engine house, which was besieged by citizens and militia on Monday. Next day, Tuesday, a force of United States marines, led by Colonel Robert E. Lee and Lieutenant J.

E. B. Stuart, arrived from Washington and battered down the doors of the citadel, capturing the raiders.

1893—Lucy Stone Blackwell, one of the original and most noted woman suffrage advocates, died at Dorchester, Mass.; born in Massachusetts 1818. MacMahon, due de Magenta, marshal of France and ex-president of the republic, died in Paris; born 1808.

HARD ON THEORIES.

When opposed by nothing solid than theories, Mr. Bryan was happy.
He could put his theories against any man's.

With facts, it is different.

Against them no theory prevails.

Mr. Bryan's theory is that depreciating prices are due to depreciated silver and appreciated gold. He has been harping on the theme ever since he was nominated. But the markets give him the lie. The following figures showing the course of prices are more eloquent than a hundred Bryans:

	Wheat, Cotton, Silver, Bachel, Pound, Ounce.
July 9.....	63½c.	7c. 68½c.
Oct. 2.....	79c.	8c. 65c.
Increase.....	15½c.	1c.
Decrease.....		3½c.

As silver goes down, wheat goes up.
Another thing that goes up is the Bryan campaign.

THEIR FAITH IN BRYAN.

President Striker, of Hamilton College, in an address in which he paid his respects to Candidate Bryan as "the Asalom of finance" made this among other telling points:

Silver is to "go to $1.29" upon the election of this day dreamer? Well, then, either the public does not think so, or does not think his election possible. Why? Because if it did think it so, and believed he would be elected, this same public would be buying silver, and in view of this market of one hundred per cent advance, would be crowding to have a share in the huge profit!

The effectiveness of the hit lay in its truthfulness; for on the very day on which President Striker made this point the price of silver sunk to the lowest point it had ever before reached in the New York market. And its price was still lower yesterday.

THE RAILROAD MEN.

If the Jamesville Bryanites were seeking to swell the McKinley vote they could find no surer way than to talk about "corrupted railroad men." Railroad men resent dictation and are never afraid to speak their minds.
They are not in the habit of accepting anybody's orders about personal affairs and the charge that they have done so in this campaign has brought them to fighting pitch. From Mc-Kinley voters they have changed to McKinley workers and their vigorous campaigning will make thousands of sound money votes between now and Nov. 3. The Bryanites might better have left them alone.

Here is a democratic summary of the Bryan convention, which closes an editorial in the Louisville, (Ky.) Post:

"In the name of democracy it preached riot and ruin; upheld usurpation; undermined the powers of the states; proclaimed repudiation as a test of loyalty, and preached confiscation as one of the means of party ascendancy."

HIGH PRICE FOR BRYAN.

"Speech is silver, but silence is golden" an old proverb runs. Mr.
Bryan has forgotten it or he never would have issued his new rate card.
Ten dollars a minute is too much for the most silvery of silver speeches.
That is the price, however, according to reliable information, which the Boy Orator has fixed as the ruling rate for his presence in any town, and unless the money is forthcoming in advance the Boy Orator's train speeds on its way to the next place upon which tribute has been levied. We understand that if Bryan is desired to leave his train and speak in a public square or hall an upset price varying from $250 to $500 is insisted upon, and if there is an escort or torchlight parade the shopkeeper along the line of march are expected to "chip in" for the man who thus drums up trade for them.

Bryan has made many innovations in the ordinary methods of campaigning, but the latest scheme for replenishing the exhausted popocratic treasury goes beyond anything ever yet attempted in the way of carrying on a presidential contest. It brings the contest so far as we are concerned down to the level of a bar room raffish, and would be disgraceful feature of an aldermanic canvass in a tough district.
To apply such methods to a candidacy for the highest office in the land indicates beyond dispute that the person who does so has no conception of the dignity of the office to which he aspires, nor any proper idea of the respect which the people, irrespective of party, desire to have for a presidential candidate. They can have no respect for a candidate who levies tribute for his presence among them, and who then harangues against the grasping money barons of the land. If there is any grasp more repugnant to the sense of the American people, it is that of the man who uses his temporary influence as a presidential candidate to extort contributions from tradesmen and others who may possibly profit by his presence among them.

THEY WORK TOGETHER.

Gen. Longstreet, the distinguished confederate veteran of Georgia, expresses an important truth in the remark that gold is not the enemy but the protector of silver. The fact underlying this statement is of tremendous force. It is that under the gold standard silver acquires its largest use as money—America, for instance, with a currency resting on a gold basis, having more silver in circulation than any distinctively free silver nation in the world. Gold, as Gen.
Longstreet declares, is the protector of silver, and silver money develops its greatest usefulness and its highest purchasing power under the gold standard.

A CUT OF ONE HALF.

According to official reports, the bank deposits in the United States on the first day of last July amounted to $5,000,000,000, and the depositors numbered nearly 11,000,000. Free coinage would simply require all these persons, representing that vast accumulation of wealth, to accept the payment of their deposits in money worth only half as much as that which they originally handed over to the banks. To ask a savings bank depositor to vote for free silver is simply to ask him to throw away fifty per cent of his surplus earnings.

The greatest question after all in this campaign is the anarchy question.
If we have Bryan and anarchy we shall have taken a long step toward the destruction of our government and people will soon be discussing how they may save their lives and property, instead of the money question.

Judge Thomas Wilson, who was once democratic candidate for governor of Minnesota and who is still a democrat, said the other day: "Most of the intelligent people of Minnesota, who have given the question careful thought, believe the state will go for McKinley with a good majority."

Perhaps if the pleadings with Tom Watson, to get off the ticket were accompanied by something more substantial than promised favors, to be conferred after Bryan becomes president —something that the astute Tom knows will never materialize—it might be more effective.

Tom Watson wants it understood that he stopped talking because he had a sore throat, and not because his feelings towards democrats in general, and especially Arthur Sewall, had changed.

There are many who think the republicans of the Ashland, Kentucky congressional ticket would better lose the district than gain it by voting for Breckinridge.

Pitchfork Tillman made so many converts—for McKinley—that the popocrats have taken him off the stump, outside of South Carolina.

Among the unkind remarks of the season is the suggestion that Bryan is merely after getting nominated again in 1900.

Senator Hill isn't receiving any invitations to take the stump because nobody knows whom he would speak for.

The latest estimate in West Virginia gives the state to McKinley by quite 15,000 majority.

HYSTERICIS.

WOMEN SHOULD UNDERSTAND THIS NERVOUS DERANGEMENT.

A Symptom of Something Far More Serious—Mrs. Barris, of Beaver Falls, Relates Her Experience.

The spasm at top of wind-pipe, or in bronchial tubes, the "ball rising in the throat," violent beating of the heart; laughing and crying by turns; muscular spasms; throwing
the arms about,
etc., tell of a derangement of the female system.

Any female complaint may produce hysterics, which must be regarded as a symptom
only. The cause, whatever it
may be,
yields quickly
to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It acts at once upon the organ affected, and the nerve centers; removes the cause, and dispels effectually the symptoms.

Mrs. Barris relates her experience for the benefit of others.

"I had been sick with ulceration of the womb, causing all kinds of disagreeable experiences, such as irritability, sleeplessness, faintness, and at times hysterics. My physician said it was the worst case he ever had. My back ached, leucorrhoea very profuse, and I had a severe bearing-down pain.
The physicians thought I should never recover, and as the last remedy, they procured your Vegetable Compound.
I had not taken more than one-fourth of a bottle, before I was more comfortable. I continued its use, also the Sanative Wash, and Liver Pills. After using four bottles, I was able to be out, and do almost all my work. I think the Vegetable Compound is the only medicine that will cure female complaints, and it will reach the worst cases in a very short time. I know it saved my life."—MRS. M. BARRIS, gists.

MEMBERS WILL WIN IF THEY "HANG ON"

FIRST M. E. CHURCH PEOPLE MAY CONQUER.

Stevens Point Congregation Force a Concession, and If Local Folk Insist, They May Be Able to Compel a Change Too—Revival Meeting Successful—Sermon Topics.

"The members of the First M. E. church can carry their point if they have pluck enough," said a man who is fully informed regarding the situation, to a Gazette man this morning. "Stevens Point people have insisted that their appointments be changed, and in all probability the changes will be made. It seems quite an arbitrary use of power to remove a pastor from a church where he has accomplished good work, and especially when his congregation want him to remain. When protest was made, I understand, the reply was that people ought to be Christians, but it seems to me that this sentiment would work both ways. Yes, I think that Janesville people can carry their point by 'hanging on.' The Stevens Point people said that if the minister appointed was sent to them they would attend some other church and the pastor could get his support somewhere else."

Bishop is Coming.

The result was that Bishop Walden telegraphed from Cincinnati to H. P. Maxfield, president of the Board of Trustees of St. Paul's church that he would arrive in that city Saturday evening, hold a conference with the board and preach Sunday morning. In the meantime the situation as regards Dr. Creighton will remain unchanged. Word was received from Presiding Elder McChesney of Appleton, that he will be in Stevens Point, Monday evening, in which time a congregational meeting will be held. It is understood that his sympathies are with the church. He was not consulted as to whether or not the transfer of Dr. Creighton to his district would be suitable to him or not. The Board of Trustees have signified to the bishop their desire to have the Rev. S. H. Anderson of Clintonville, appointed to that charge.

The Evangelistic Meetings.

The special Evangelistic meetings of the Baptist church have been largely attended and full of spiritual interest. They will be continued until Wednesday evening of next week. No revival services will be held this evening.

CHEERS FOR GOLD AT SILVER RALLY

POPOCRATIC SPEAKER COMPELLED TO CEASE.

Col. George W. Bird Mentions McKinley's Name While Speaking For Bryan at Beloit, and the Audience Yelled Itself Hoarse—Republican Assignments For Next Week.

A magic word fell from the lips of Col. George W. Bird while he was making a popocratic speech at Beloit last night.

"McKinley!"

He got no further.

"Whoop!" called a man in the audience while scores of palms smote each other with all the strength the owners could command. Men pounded on the floor with canes and stamped their feet.

Col. Bird tried to continue his speech but could not, so enthusiastic was the applause at the mention of McKinley's name.

The big audience had come to hear a free silver speech, but the McKinley enthusiasm had to break loose when the republican leader's name was mentioned.

Scarcely a ripple of applause was heard except on this one occasion, and Mr. Bird's speech had no effect. It was dry and uninteresting, dealing entirely with ancient lore. No attempt was made to explain how free coinage of silver would help the workmen who made up the larger part of the audience, but the whole address was directed at the perpetrators of the "crime of '73."

LOCKE ON FINANCE.

THE GREAT ENGLISH ECONOMIST IS AGAINST SILVER.

He is One of the Most Acute and Logical Reasoners—Says that Some of the Theories of Silverites, Democrats Moves Him to Mirth.

In the great treatise on the value of money by John Locke (see works of John Locke, London, 1823, Vol. 5), one of the most acute and logical reasoners that any nation or any age has given to the world, he defines money to be necessary to all sorts of men in trade "both for counters and for pledges." This is his quaint and old-fashioned way of saying that it is both a measure or standard of value and a medium of exchange. Money, he tells us, carries with it as "counters" what he calls "even reckoning," and as "pledges" it carries "security" that he that receives it shall have the same value for it again, of other things that he wants, whenever he pleases. The one of these it does by its stamp and denomination; the other by its intrinsic value, which is its quantity. The standard money of Locke's day was silver. A given quantity of silver, whether stamped or unstamped, has a certain intrinsic value, and this intrinsic value constitutes the "security" that he that receives it shall have the same value for it again. The only purpose of the stamp and denomination is to make a given quantity of silver serve as a "counter," in order that there may be "even reckoning" in all business transactions. The stamp he correctly declares to be nothing more than "a public voucher of its weight and fineness;" and so little importance does he attach to the denomination, that he observes that "here in England there might as well have been twelve shillings in a penny, as twelvence in a shilling."

Basing his argument, as he does, upon the fundamental truth that there is and can be no difference in value between bullion coined and uncoined, and upon the supplemental truth that the value of bullion is measured by its weight, he explains to his readers that "the necessity of proportion of money to trade depends on money, not as counters, for the reckoning may be kept or transferred by writing; but on money as a pledge, which writing cannot supply the place of, because a law cannot give to bills that intrinsic value which the universal consent of mankind has annexed to silver and gold." This is the very essence of the fatal objection to our modern American "greenback" heresy. The greenbacker regards money merely as "counters," and very truly argues that there is no need that money, from this point of view, shall have intrinsic value. But he overlooks the fact that money is also "a pledge," and that a pledge or security must have intrinsic value. If it has no intrinsic value, it will be accepted in trade only on trust, as a memorandum of indebtedness to be discharged at some future time; and, the moment that confidence is shaken in its ultimate redemption, its nominal value begins to decline, until, when confidence in its redemption is destroyed, it no longer passes current.

Concerning the vexed question of the amount of money required, Locke remarks that it is hard to determine the necessary proportion of money to trade, "because it depends not barely on the quantity of money, but the quickness of its circulation. The very same shilling may, at one time, pay twenty men in twenty days; at another, rest in the same hands a hundred days together." He anticipates the argument of Mr. Bryan, and others, who advocate the cheapening of the American dollar, and even Mr. Bryan's quaint illustration, taken from the "teeter-board," in the following words: "There is another seeming consequence of the reducing of money to a low price, which at first sight has such an appearance of truth in it that I have known it to impose upon very able men; and that is, that the lowering of interest" (against which he was writing) "will raise the value of all other things in proportion. For money being the counter-balance to all other things purchasable by it, and lying, as it were, in the opposite scale of commerce, it looks like a natural consequence that as much as you take off from the value of money so much you add to the price of other things that are exchanged for it. . . . The mistake of this plausible way of reasoning will be easily discovered when we consider that the measure of the value of money, in proportion to anything purchasable by it, is the quantity of the ready money we have in comparison with the quantity of that thing and its vent" (by "vent" he means demand in its relation to supply); "or, which amounts to the same thing, the price of any commodity rises or falls, by the proportion of the number of buyers and sellers." In other words, the ratio which determines prices is not the ratio between money and property, but the ratio between the number of producers and that of consumers of any article in the market. This ratio is not affected, directly or indirectly, by the volume of the currency. "Money," he says, "serves us commonly by its exchange, never almost by its consumption;" and he adds, in direct contradiction to the theory held and promulgated by Mr. Bryan (that the only honest dollar is a stable dollar). Though the use men make of money be not in its consumption, yet it has not at all a more standing, settled value, in exchange with any other thing than any other commodity has."

The idea that legislation has power to alter the value of money moves him to mirth. "These men," he says, "have found out by a cunning project, how, by the restraint of a law, to make the price of money one-third cheaper, and then they tell John a Nokes that he shall have £10,000 of it to employ in merchandise or clothing, and John a Stiles shall have £20,000 more to pay his debts; and so distribute this money as freely as Diego did his legacies, which they are to have, even where they can get them. But still these men can instruct the forward borrowers where they shall be furnished, they have perhaps done something to increase men's desire, but not made money one jot easier to come by; and, till they do that, all this sweet jingling of money in their discourses just goes to the tune of "If all the world were oatmeal."

This is all very entertaining and instructive; but the interest for us here and now of Locke's teachings on the subject of money culminates in his discussion of the nature and effect of "clipping" or "raising" coin. Money is "raised," in the sense which he attaches to the word, when its nominal value exceeds its actual value. What he means by raised coin is what we mean by depreciated coin. Whenever coin has two values, one actual and one nominal, we may of course fix our minds upon either; the nominal value is raised, when the actual value falls. Clipping was an unauthorized method of raising coin, closely allied to counterfeiting. Every student of English history knows that it was once so common and serious an evil as to demand the severest measures for its repression, so that it was treated as a capital offense, being such an encroachment upon the prerogative of the crown as to smack of veritable treason. Any alteration in the legal standard of value which has the effect to depreciate the mint valuation of the coin of the realm, is, on the part of the crown, the equivalent of clipping by private persons. Against this folly Locke inveighs with a restrained power of logic almost amounting to intellectual passion. Nearly all that he says about it is susceptible of direct application to existing conditions in the United States and to the financial controversy which will decide the presidential election next month.

Locke was not a bimetalist, nor a believer in the so-called "double standard," as appears from his remark that "silver, and silver alone, is the measure of commerce." (There was then little gold in the world, and silver was far less plentiful than now.) "Two metals, as gold and silver, cannot be the measure of commerce both together in any country; because the measure of commerce must be perpetually the same, invariable, and keeping the same proportion in all its parts. But so only one metal does, or can do, to itself; so silver is to silver, and gold to gold. An ounce of silver is always of equal value to an ounce of silver and an ounce of gold to an ounce of gold, and two ounces of the one or other, of double the value to an ounce of the same. But gold and silver change their value one to another; and one may as well make a measure v. g. a yard, whose parts lengthen and shrink, as a measure of trade of materials that have not always a settled, invariable value to one another." He, therefore, desired that silver might alone be recognized as the legal standard of valuation, and gold be treated as a commodity. But he cautioned his readers that "the value of silver, considered as money and the measure of commerce, is nothing but its quantity."

"Nobody," he thinks, "can be so senseless as to imagine that 19 grains or ounces of silver shall at the same time exchange for, or buy, as much corn, oil, or wine as 20, which is to raise it to the value of 20." The just effect, he tells us, of "raising" silver by one-twentieth—not one-half, as is proposed in the Chicago platform—will be to "rob all creditors of one-twentieth of their debts and all landlords one-twentieth of their quit-rents forever." The second will be that "men will presently raise their commodities five per cent, so that if yesterday 20 crowns would exchange for 20 bushels of wheat, or 20 yards of a certain sort of cloth, if you will to-day coin current crowns one-twentieth lighter, and make them the standard, you will find 20 crowns will exchange for but 19 bushels of wheat, or 19 yards of that cloth, which will be just as much silver for a bushel as yesterday." Silver will be "of no more real value by your giving the same denomination to a less quantity of it." It is impossible to state this principle more clearly than Locke states it, in the words: "So much as you lessen your coin, so much more you must pay in tale, as will make the quantity of silver the merchant expects for his commodity; under what denomination soever he receives it;" and again, "If you make your money less in weight, it must be made up in tale;" that is, in the number of pieces paid out. The "raising" of money "is in effect nothing but giving a denomination of more pence to the same quantity of silver. Whether you call the piece coined twelve-pence, or fifteen-pence, or sixpence, or seventy-five, a crown or a sceptre, it will buy no more silk, salt or bread than it would before." "It is silver by its quantity, and not denomination, that is the price of things."

Locke meets the familiar objection to this self-evident truth, that clipped coin is accepted, in many transactions, at its face valuation, by observing that "clipped and unclipped money will always buy an equal quantity of anything else, as long as they will without scruple change one for another." It is "all one to the seller whether he receives his money in clipped money or no, so it be but current." But "if the quantity of your clipped coin be once grown so great, that the foreign merchant cannot (if he has a mind to it) easily get weight money for it, he will, in selling his goods, either contract to be paid in weight money, or else raise the price of his commodity, according to the diminished quantity of silver in your current coin." The application of this remark to a silver dollar not worth its face in gold is obvious. The government can float a limited, but not an unlimited, number of such dollars.

Locke moreover distinctly perceives and emphasizes the difference between past and future contracts. "In contracts already made, if your species" (coins or specie) "be by law coined a fifth part lighter, under the same denomination, the creditor must take a hundred such light shillings, or twenty such light crown pieces for £5 1s, if the law calls them so, but he loses one-fifth in the intrinsic value of his debt. But in bargains to be made and things to be purchased, money has, and always will have, its value from the quantity of silver in it, and not from the stamp and denomination."

Finally, upon the great question of the morality of raising the nominal value of coin, this honest and independent thinker remarks: "It will rob all creditors of one-twentieth (or five per cent) of their debts, and all landlords one-twentieth of their quit-rents forever; and in all other rents, as far as their former contracts read, or five per cent of their yearly income; and this without any advantage to the debtor or farmer. For he, receiving no more pounds sterling for his land or commodities in this new lighter coin than he should have done of your old and weightier money, gets nothing by it. If you say, Yes, he will receive more crowns, half-crowns and shilling pieces for what he now sells for new money than he should have done if the money of the old standard had continued, you confess your money is not raised in value, but in denomination; since what your new pieces want in weight must now be made up in number. . . . This is at first sight visible, that in all payments to be received upon precedent contracts, if your money be in effect raised, the receiver will lose five per cent." Elsewhere he observes: "Mr. Lowndes"—who was the English Bryan of two hundred years ago, and who made the same complaint of the rising silver shilling that Mr. Bryan now makes of the rising gold dollar—"says that silver in England is grown scarce, and consequently dearer, and so is of higher price. This, if it were so, ought not to annul any man's bargain nor make him receive less in quantity than he lent. He was to receive again the same sum, and the public authority was guarantee that the same sum should have the same quantity of silver under the same denomination. And the reason is plain, why in justice he ought to have the same quantity of silver again, notwithstanding any pretended rise of its value. For if silver had grown more plentiful, and by consequence (by our author's rule) cheaper, his debtor would not have been compelled, by the public authority, to have paid him, in consideration of its cheapness, a greater quantity of silver than they contracted for. Cocoanuts were the money of a part of America, when we first came here. Suppose then you had lent me last year 300, or fifteen score cocoanuts, to be repaid this year, would you be satisfied and think yourself paid your due, if I should tell you cocoanuts were scarce this year, and that four score were of as much value this year as a hundred last; and that therefore you were well and fully paid, if I restored to you only 240 for the 300 I borrowed? Would you not think yourself defrauded of two thirds" (one-fifth) "of your right by such payment? Nor would it make any amends for this to justice or reparation to you that the public had (after your contract, which was made for fifteen score) altered the denomination of a score and declared it to be sixteen instead of twenty."

Locke's reputation as a philosopher is too great and has been too enduring to be questioned. He lived and wrote two centuries ago. At that time corporations, syndicates and trusts were unknown. There is no reference in his writings to paper money. Silver was the standard of valuation. He cannot, therefore, be accused of being in the pay of corporations, or upon the side of monopoly in opposition to the people, or of being actuated by prejudice for or against bank notes or treasury notes, or of being a blind worshiper of the yellow metal. At that time the modern system of machinery as a substitute for hand labor had not begun to develop, so that the labor question of to-day did not affect his views. Neither was there then the great expansion of commercial credits, which the inventive talent of the nineteenth century and the demands of business under the altered conditions of life have created. It must therefore appear, to every unprejudiced reader of his works, that a man today, in the United States, may hold the philosophical and economic opinions which were maintained and defined with such perspicuity and force by this apostle of sound currency, without being justly open to the charge of prejudice of any sort, political or economical. Locke said of himself: "I shall never knowingly be on any but truth's and my country's side; the former I shall always gladly embrace and honor whoever shows it to me; and in these papers, I am sure I have no other aim but to do what little I can for the service of my country." It is in the same spirit of loyalty to truth and devotion to the honor of the American name, as well as to the prosperity of the American nation, including all its members, whether employers or employed, rich or poor, debtors or creditors, purchasers or consumers, buyers or sellers, Republicans, Democrats, or Populists.

Belts Narrow and Wide—The Former Apt to Miss Connections.

It is still rather early to say absolutely that a certain thing will be worn and another certain thing will not be worn. Even after general forms have been apparently fully decided upon and modes definitely adopted there is still more than a possibility of change. The best that can be done at present is to denote the probabilities of fashion.

The element of uncertainty being recognized, it may be said that contrasting accessories are likely to continue in favor, and that belts, corselets, collars, vests and revers of light colors or white promise to be features of winter fashions. By the way, speaking of belts, a word ought to be said about the narrow ones which have been and still are in vogue. Everybody knows the difficulty of keeping skirt, bodice and separate belt in the proper relation to each other, and the narrower the belt the harder it is to keep it in the right place—that is, covering the junction of the skirt and bodice. It is not too much to say that not one narrow belt out of 50 worn occupies the proper position. Usually the skirt band sags far below it at the back, and almost as often the same skirt band is much wider than the belt and projects above it at the front and sides. Now, if the narrow belt gets the upper hand of a woman, an hopeless, she would better abandon it altogether and wear a wide one or a pointed waist and look neat and trim. However up to date all the details of a woman's toilet may be, she will not look fashionable if her clothes are not put on carefully and with no suspicion of untidiness. A soiled collar, a greasy spot, a sagging skirt, a loose or missing button, a bodice pulled away—any one of these is enough to destroy the elegance of a costume, however costly it may be.

The illustration shows a house jacket of an entirely new design. It is of ivory woven goods and has a close fitting coat back, while the front is composed of a sort of large ruffle over a wider ruffle of lace. The chemise of lace falls in straight folds. The sleeves are wrinkled transversely throughout their length and have a frill of lace at the wrists. JUDIC CHOLLET.

MATERIALS AND MODES.

Smooth Cloth For Street Wear—The Ugly Straight Sack.

Stripes and checks in woolen goods will be much worn and will compose very effective costumes, rendered elegant by the addition of velvet as a trimming. Some sort of ornamentation is always necessary for these materials if they are to have a "smart" appearance, and velvet is considered especially appropriate as well as at present extremely fashionable.

A great deal of cloth is to be worn this winter—in fact, it promises to be a cloth season. Although smooth finished goods are considered rather susceptible to injury, if the cloth is sponged before being made up its powers of endurance are much increased, as it is less apt to show spots and defacements. The sponging may be done at home, although it saves time and trouble to order it done at the establishment where the goods are purchased. For general purposes, such as ordinary calls and afternoon street wear, a nice cloth costume is very useful and appropriate. This winter the short, straight sack, which is becoming ing fashionable, will be much worn with cloth gowns and will frequently be made of the same material to match.

Wide belts, corselets and swiss girdles are to remain in vogue all winter. These are especially suitable for slight figures. If the latter are well formed, but should be sedulously avoided by a woman with a clumsy figure or a large waist.

While it is true that there are many new designs for jackets for winter wear and that the straight sack is making a tremendous bid for popularity, capes will still be much worn. When fashionably made and trimmed, they have a more elegant appearance than coats and are certainly more convenient to wear, if less warm.

The cut shows a costume of pearl gray armor. The skirt has a rich trimming of black velvet application heavily embroidered, and a band of chinchilla fur passes about the foot. The bodice, which has a short basque, is entirely covered with black velvet applications and is bordered by a band of chinchilla. The full vest is of white mousseline de soie. The tight sleeves of armor have an immense bow of black satin at the top, and the belt is of black satin. The jet toque is trimmed with pink roses and a black bow.

What the Boy Did.

The boy stood on the burning deck, a mariner quite bold. The deck burned out beneath his feet and dropped him in the hold. When down below he struck a scheme that worked beyond a doubt, for he found a port hole in the side and put the fire out.—N. Y. World.

A Striking Personality.

She—You saw the count of Brasse, did you? Now, tell me, don't you think he is a striking personage?

He—Yes, I do. I had not been introduced to him an hour when he struck me for a loan of ten dollars.—Bay City Chat.

The Joys of Childhood.

Jimmy—Say, let's swipe the sign off that stoop that's been painted.

Tommy—What do you want with the sign?

Jimmy—Don't want the sign. Want to see people brush against the stoop.—N. Y. World.

His Point of View.

"So you cheerfully concede that your son knows more than you do?"

"Certainly. You don't catch me admitting that my father could bring up children better than I can."—Chicago Record.

Under Mitigating Circumstances.

Jinks—How much do you think a minister ought to get for marrying a couple?

Filkins—Well, if wholly unacquainted with them, perhaps he might be let off with six months.—Town Topics.

That Accounted for It.

Guest—This plate is stone cold.

Waitress—It was hot when I left the kitchen with it.

Charged With Many Misdeeds.

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 16.—George T. Quinn, for whom the police of New York have been searching for the past six weeks, has been arrested at Lake View, Riverside county, where he was living on a ranch. Quinn was collector for J. B. Hall, a New York decorator, and is charged with raising a check from $441 to $741. He decamped with the wife of H. W. Gamble of Brooklyn, and while en route to California stopped off at Eudora, Kas., where he married a young woman who was said to be very wealthy. He deserted her in a few days and when arrested at Lake View was living with the Gamble woman.

Galena Bandits in the Woods.

Galena, Ill., Oct. 17.—The Bauer robbers are still at large, but news of their capture is expected every hour. The woods in which the robbers are hiding are dense and cover a rough stretch of country. The pursuers have the timber thoroughly surrounded, but there has been no attempt to penetrate into the woods. The sheriff's theory is that within a day or two hunger and exhaustion will drive the men from their fastness, in which they could baffle pursuit.
